

C5 Medical Werks Announces New Facility in Grand Junction, Colorado

New facility to house brand new subsidiary of CoorsTek with medical components focus.

Grand Junction, Colorado, October 18, 2005 – C5 Medical Werks, a recently established manufacturer of advanced ceramic medical components, today officially announced their new facility at 2451 River Road in Grand Junction, Colorado.

A subsidiary of technical ceramics giant CoorsTek, C5 Medical Werks will focus specifically on ceramics used in the human body like hip, spine, and dental implants. The company will install state-of-the-art manufacturing capabilities to meet the demanding needs of these applications including advanced materials development, forming technologies, firing equipment, and precision finishing capabilities. All systems, procedures, and quality requirements will comply with cGMP and ISO-13485 standards.

“We’ve made a substantial investment to ensure our operations compete on a global level,” stated C5 Medical Werks President, Brad Coors. “We fully expect to be the market leader in our chosen niche,” continued Coors. Drawing from its parent company’s 90-year plus experience in technical ceramic manufacturing, C5 Medical Werks believes it is especially well suited to meet an emerging consumer demand for long-term wear solutions in implantable components.

With the company’s leadership staff in place, C5 Medical Werks officially opened its doors on October 1, 2005. Over the next few months several technical and administrative positions will be posted as the company grows.
